Evening of Hungarian Folk Dancing

A great chance for everyone to have fun and explore the unique tradition of Hungarian folk dance and music. The event will be led by Tamás Ferencz, a graduate of the Hungarian Dance Academy. Folk dance events held by Tamás have been very popular across the UK.

Chasing the Double Eagle

Reflections on the Physical and Psychological Archaeology of Habsburg Rule

Peter Pulzer

Prof Pulzer is Gladstone Professor Emeritus of Government at All Souls College and the author of numerous works on Central European history. The talk will focus on the idea that while Empires are on the whole exploitative and wicked, what they leave behind can be beneficial and interesting.

Translating From Hungarian: My First Fifty Years

Peter Sherwood

Peter Sherwood was born in Hungary and moved to the UK in 1957. A writer, editor, translator and lexicographer, he has taught at universities in both the UK and the US. His translations include works by Noémi Szécsi and Miklós Vámos, and he will be talking to us about his very varied experiences.

PLEASE NOTE

The first three events will be hosted in the Buttery of Wolfson College. The following four will take place in the Harris Seminar Room in Oriel College.

Polar Exploration: North and South

Bryan Cain

Barely mentioning the important, but overly well-known, stories of Scott, Shackelton, and Franklin, this presentation sketches the entire history of exploration around the North and South Poles from its beginning until late in the 20th century. Yes, Hungary figures in this story!

Bryan Cain is a retired academic who has never been within a thousand miles of either Pole.

Austro-Hungarian Soldiers in a Post-Austro-Hungarian World

Adam Luptak (Oriel College)

Adam, from Bratislava, Slovakia, is a DPhil student in History at Oriel College. In his talk, which stems from his doctoral research, he will discuss the topic of veterans of the Great War in interbellum Czechoslovak society.

MRI Wars - Attack of the Fat

Ferenc Emil Mózes (St Cross College)

MRI is a painless, non-invasive and safe way of taking pictures of the inside of the human body. However, an evil plot has been set up by metabolites and minerals to undermine the power of MRI scanners and provide poor images. Will a physicist win the battle and bring balance to the Force?

Ferenc is a DPhil student in magnetic resonance physics in the Division of Cardiovascular Medicine.

PLEASE NOTE

The first three events will be hosted in the Buttery of Wolfson College. The following four will take place in the Harris Seminar Room in Oriel College.
